The historical dictionary of the United States-East Asia relations provides a brief history of each of the fortifications established in what became the United States-East Asia. It spans approximately 400 years, beginning in the 1500s and ending in the 20th century. The dictionary is organized by country, and each entry includes a brief history of the fortifications established in that country. The entries are arranged in alphabetical order, and each entry includes a cross-reference to related entries. The dictionary also includes a chronology, an introduction, and a bibliography. The dictionary is a useful resource for anyone interested in the history of the United States-East Asia relations.